LaGrange, IL (August 30, 2016) - Grant Dixon, founder of Dixon Law Office in LaGrange, Illinois, is chair of The John Marshall Law School Class of 1991's 25-Year Reunion.

The class reunion reception will be held at 5:30 p.m. on Friday, September 9, 2016, at The John Marshall Law School Student Commons located at 304 S. State St., Chicago.

"As a member of the class of '91, I'm honored and happy to chair this important event," said Dixon. "I'm extremely grateful for the great education I received at the school. I use the knowledge I learned every day to help my personal injury and workers' compensation clients."

Dixon also values the network of talented lawyers he met and built relationships with during law school. "It's important to maintain these connections because we serve as a great network of support and counsel to one another in our day-to-day work as attorneys," he says.

The reunion committee expects approximately 50 alums and their significant others to attend. Nearly 400 students were members of the graduating class of 1991.

The John Marshall Law School was founded in 1899, and has upheld a tradition of diversity, innovation and opportunity. The school has consistently provided an education that combines an understanding of the theory, the philosophy and the practice of law. The school offers one of the most comprehensive and aggressive professional skills training curricula in the country, including trial and appellate advocacy, alternative dispute resolution, client counseling, negotiations and legal drafting. www.jmls.edu
