

The John Marshall Publishing Company

The John Marshall Publishing Company specializes in materials for the law, medical and accounting practitioner, law students, legal and medical assistants. All publications are sold for the purpose of assisting in training of professionals and the maintaining of professional competence. The John Marshall Publishing Company is not engaged in rendering legal, medical or accounting advice. Materials are intended to be up-to-date when published, but all materials are subject to change through action of the courts, regulatory agencies or medical discoveries. Therefore, specific legal, medical or accounting advice should be obtained from a practicing professional.

Library of Congress Catalog Card Number: 89-61340

ISBN 0-916081-19-2

Copyright 1989 by The John Marshall Publishing Company

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopy, recording, or any information retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publisher: The John Marshall Publishing Company, 4888 Loop Central Drive, Suite 800, Houston, Texas 77081.

Printed in the United States of America.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

All of the authors have contributed to the planning and preparation of these materials, and indeed to the development of policy and law on AIDS-related issues. But the primary responsibility for the preparation of Chapters 1, 2, and 3 was undertaken by Scott Isaacman and Michael Closen; of Chapter 4 by Robert Jarvis; of Chapter 5 by Arthur Leonard; of Chapters 6 and 13 by Patricia Horne; of Chapter 7 by Michael Closen; of Chapter 8 by Rhonda Rivera; of Chapter 9 by Mark Scherzer; of Chapters 10 and 12 by Donald Hermann; of Chapter 11 by Gene Schultz; and of Chapters 14 and 15 by Mark Wojcik. Michael Closen edited the entire text.

Many people and institutions deserve credit for their valuable assistance in the preparation of these materials. Each of the authors wishes to thank specific parties, and we all join in these acknowledgments.

Michael L. Closen: For the fine research assistance of Gregg Bonelli, Michael Bonaguro, John Brunkowski, Grant Dixon, Steven Rakowski, and Douglas Wolk. For the efficient typing and administrative efforts of faculty secretaries Gwen Koningsfeld Sara Moss, Vanessa Saffold and Darci Allen. For the support and encouragement of Dean Peter McGovern and the faculty and administration of the John Marshall Law School.

Donald H.J. Hermann: For the support on this project and the other AIDS-related research activities of the Health Law Institute at DePaul University from Dean John Roberts, Adjunct Professor George F. DeWolfe, and Patricia J. Horne, who formerly served as Director of AIDS Legal Research Activities of the Health Law Institute. For the interest and encouragement of students enrolled in the AIDS seminar at DePaul University, and to the patients, physicians, public officials and involved citizens who have contributed to the conferences, seminars, and citizen initiatives of the Health Law Institute which are the forebears of publication projects such as this casebook. For the vital and continuing staff support of Virginia Knittle.

Patricia J. Horne: For the excellent training on AIDS, and the law generally, provided by Professors Donald Hermann and George DeWolfe. For the fine editorial help and constant inspiration of my sister Kathleen.

Scott H. Isaacman: For the courageous example set by Dr. Robert Stark.

Robert M. Jarvis: For the able contributions of research assistant Elizabeth Fein.

Arthur S. Leonard: For the invaluable research assistance of Randolph Iannacone. For the outstanding contributions that underlay much of the progress in the law on AIDS and discrimination from Alan Koral, Abby Rubinfeld, Steven Gittleson, Mark Senak, Mitchell Karp, Susan McGrievy, Leonard Graff, and a host of others, including the staff and volunteers of public interest organizations too numerous to mention. For the cooperation and support of Dean James F. Simon and the administration and faculty of New York Law School.