The Risks of Social Media in Personal Injury Cases

In today's connected world, social media plays a big part in our everyday lives. However, it is a big concern in personal injury cases. In almost every case, insurance companies, their teams of investigators and their lawyers work hard to find and check the social media accounts of the people making claims.

Judges usually don't like these requests unless there are very good reasons. Many cases have shown that victims have a right to keep their online lives private. But the requests to access social media keep coming.

It may seem like accessing social media profiles is harmless but there are real dangers. Here are just three common dangers of social media in personal injury cases.
